

As citizens our rights and freedoms should be of extreme concern to the FCC. And to think that special interest groups or industry giants with deep pockets and power have more say than all of the citizens of this country is more than disturbing to say the least. You have an obligation to do what is best, not what is convenient or more lucrative for groups that promise to do what is best. Just because the FCC has a difficult task, doesn't mean the FCC gets to lie down or use excuses to make it easier on itself. Sometimes 'No' is the only word needed.

If the FCC thinks it is having trouble getting citizen input now just wait when even the FCC WILL BE SENSORED! By the way, these industries that are important if not vital to our nation and its freedoms become corrupt by capitalism or greed, or whatever economic situation, what is the difference between U.S.A. or a Government controlled media(i.e.:media run country) At some point the very system that allows prosperity and free trade starts eating through its boundaries is the same point at which it is no longer free. In other words there is a limit to everything. These industries and the people who run them do not appear to be in the United States because they enjoy free press or media, but appear to not understand the fundamental word free and want to own the United States by visual and verbal and written media. Their desire to push for ultimate ownership of all forms of media in whatever quantity they can get shows their lack of concern and respect for our country and their lack of responsibility for their industry. I find it very disturbing to find the FCC is trying to cater to these entities. It makes me wonder how corrupt is the FCC? Because, why is the FCC thinking about the very thing it is supposed to keep from happening?

People need to be accountable and this is very dangerous ground the FCC is treading on.
